

RED CROSS STAMPS.

All Societies Will Continue in Great National Sale.

Arrangements for the sale of Red Cross Christmas Seals for 1910 were announced by bulletin issued by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis and the American Red Cross. "A million for Tuberculosis" will be the slogan of the 1910 campaign.

Two features of the sale this year are unique and will bring considerable capital to the tuberculosis fighters. The American National Red Cross is to issue the stamps as in former years, but this organization will work in close cooperation with the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, which body will share in the proceeds of the sales. The charge to local associations for the use of the national stamps has been reduced also from 20 per cent to 12½ per cent, which will mean at least $50,000 more for tuberculosis work in all parts of the United States.

The stamps are to be designed as "Red Cross Seals" this year as they are to be placed on the back of letters instead of on the front.

The National Conference of Tuberculosis Secretaries through its President, Mr. John A. Kingsbury of New York has issued a letter calling upon all state and local anti-tuberculosis associations to unite with the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis and the Red Cross Society in the sale of Christmas seals and the extermination of tuberculosis. Every effort will be made to discourage the use of local stamps and to encourage the distribution of the national stickers. It is expected that over 430 anti-tuberculosis associations and hundred of Red Cross societies in every state of the Union will unite in the sale of Christmas seals.

EVER WATCHFUL.

A Little Care Will Save Many. Sterling Readers Future Trouble.

Watch the kidney secretions. See that they have the amber hue of health.

The discharges not excessive or infrequent;

Contain no "brick-dust like" sediment;

Doan's Kidney Pills will do this for you.

They watch the kidneys and cure them when they're sick.

Mrs. Hazzard Trimble, 4 Jamison St., Mt. Sterling, Ky., says:

"I am pleased to say that Doan's Kidney Pills helped me greatly.

I was in poor health for some time and was unable to stand or do my housework. I had pains in my left side, accompanied by a bearing down feeling through my kidneys. The passages of the kidney secretions were irregular and at times so strong that there was an almost complete retention.

I began to notice symptoms of dropsy in my limbs and hands and my condition was becoming worse when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at F. C. Duerson's Drug Store.

I soon was greatly benefited and I felt like a different woman.

Doan's Kidney Pills have convinced me of their effectiveness and consequently I am pleased to give them my endorsement."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

A Woman's Sphere.

They talk about a woman's sphere as though it had a limit; There's not a place in earth or heaven,

There's not a task to mankind given,

There's not a blessing or a woe, There's not a yes or whispered no,

There's not a life, or death or birth,

That has a feather's worth,

Without a woman in it.

Women of the world are usually the queens of the home.

Let this light reflect around this revolving world; woman's real work is on character, her surest weapon is influence.

Every wife should be the mistress of her own home. But the grandmother and the mother-in-law should be the most welcome and most respected of all visitors.

A kindly courtesy goes a good way in a busy household; and if in our home we use the same politeness we offer our guests we shall have no ill-fitting "company manners."

The unmarried woman works for necessity, for love of her dependent ones, for love of some (beautiful or benevolent profession).

for sweet mercy and charity to the ignorant, for horror of dependence upon those on whom she has no claim—seldom for business, ambition or material accumulation.

While a man admires womanly beauty, yet in married life he admires much more—a good square meal cooked by his loving spouse; and let a wife have little or no knowledge of the art of house-keeping, domestic economy, or is a poor cook, be her husband rich as Croesus, her lot will be miserable.

Creation advanced from the simple to the more complex, from the low to the high. Man is later and higher than the fish of the sea, the birds of the air and the beasts of the field, and woman is later and higher than man—last and highest work of creative energy. In woman the dust of the earth reaches its ultimate possibilities.

It is susceptible of no finer organization.

Workers' Big Drink Bill.

According to the syllabus of the board of education on temperance and hygiene, about two-thirds of the United States drink bill, or nearly $10,000,000 a week, is spent by the working classes.

Housework a Noble Occupation.

When properly practised, house-work is as noble an occupation as any girl or woman can undertake.—Ethel Schor.

It is estimated that the gold coast and Ashanti could supply 60,843 lbs of mahogany and cedar a year if the internal communication were better.

With mechanical baggage, such as traction engines and light railways, the output could be increased to some 250,000 lbs per annum without depleting the natural reserves.

THE NEWARK CASE.

On the night of July 8, last, it will be remembered that Carroll Etherington, a young white man, charged with murder, was taken by a mob from the jail of Newark, Ohio, and hanged.

Governor Harmon, who never fails to see and do his duty, went after the offenders in such a vigorous manner, as to cause the grand jury of Licking county to return nearly sixty indictments.

These occurrences are only possible where inefficient and unworthy men are in office, as shown by the following paragraphs of the grand jury's report:

"Our investigation discloses:

That a lawless mob ran riot throughout the day on the public streets, engaging in assaults upon citizens, all of which was done without hindrance or effort of influence upon the part of the Sheriff or the Mayor and the Court of Police.

"That at a time when the riot was culminating in an attack upon the jail the Sheriff cowardly deserted his post and left the jail and its inmates unprotected."

"That the Mayor, who was present, and had personal knowledge that the mob was attacking the jail, deliberately left the scene of the riot and went to his home and to bed.

"That the Chief of Police, together with the police force, put forth no attempt to prevent the outrage.

"That after the Chief had visited the jail and saw the attacks no orders or instructions were given by him to the eight or ten policemen then present to disperse the mob, but, on the contrary, he left the jail yard, while the iron doors of the jail were being battered down, and while the man Etherington was being taken from the jail and hanged at the corner of the Courthouse square, this man, wearing the uniform of Chief of Police, was then at a nearby grocery and saloon in company with others engaged in a social game of cards."

The next step is for the petit juries to do their duty, and if they do, it will be a long time before Newark is again similarly disgraced.

ROSEVELT'S CONSISTENCY.

Newspapers everywhere are commenting on the new platform enunciated by our former President. Among other reforms, he now advocates personal responsibility upon the part of officials of corporations, for violations of the law and a law forbidding corporations from making campaign contributions. Like many practical politicians, (and he is certainly that, if anything), he does not "practice what he preaches." Not many years ago, Judson Harmon, of Ohio, was about to fasten a violation of the anti-trust law, upon Paul Morton, then a member of Roosevelt's Cabinet. Harmon proceeded upon the announced theory that "guilt is personal." Teddy did not then see it that way and ordered the prosecution of Morton discontinued. That his political success in the past has been due to the free use of enormous corruption funds, no one doubts for a moment and the paramount thought now is, can even Teddy " Fool all the people all the time?"

Tell your troubles to the "Graunde Inquest."

Little drops of water,
Poured into the milk,
Give the milkman's daughter
Lovely gown of silk
Little grains of sugar,
Mixed with the grocer's sand,
Make the grocer's assets
Sweet to the hand.
Little bowls of custard,
Humble though they seem,
Help to enrich the fellow
Selling pure ice cream.
Little rocks and boulders,
Little chunks of slate
Make the coal man a fortune
Something fierce and great.
Little ads in the ADVOCATE,
Printed and sent,
Give the joyful mer man
Home on easy street.

Editor of Winchester News Interred.

While out driving last Thursday afternoon, in Clark county, near the residence of the late Square John Evans, on the Petticoat Runpike, Mr. W. A. Beatty, editor of the Winchester News, was thrown from a buggy and had his left arm broken.

They had stopped to water their horse when Mr. William French, of Clark county, who was with Mr. Beatty, discovered that the horse would not drink until he had removed the bridle. As soon as this was done the horse began to run and Mr. Beatty was helpless. Mr. Beatty was thrown from the buggy and dragged for some distance. The buggy was completely destroyed.

He was removed to the St. Joseph Hospital in Lexington, where he is reported to be rapidly improving.

Attractive Simplicity in Window Decoration.

Changes in the methods of dressing show windows are constantly taking place, but most of these changes come about gradually so that we sometimes fail to see where we are being led. It is the very slowness with which the methods change that sometimes deceives us and leads us astray. We accept fashions that have come to us through gradual evolution because each succeeding change is but a variation of something to which we have already become accustomed, whereas, if all the intermediate steps were eliminated, and the style were presented as something entirely new, we would see it in an entirely different light.

Some ten or twelve years ago window dressing was something very different from what it is today, says Albert A. Koester, in MERCHANT'S RECORD. At all time there were comparatively few highclass floral decorations to be had and the window dresser had to rely largely upon his own ingenuity and cleverness to design and make everything that he used in his windows. Some one found that cheesecloth could be puffed easily and with good effect, and every-hailed the discovery with joy and proceeded to fill his windows with cotton cheesecloth in all the variegated colors of a June flower garden. The use of cheesecloth grew gradually until it was used almost universally. It was the main feature of all sorts of displays in big and little stores. After having been worked to death, cheesecloth was discarded and is seen no more.

The elaborate and heavy scrolls and fancy framework of a few years ago have also passed away, as have the complicated mechanical butterflies, stars and other old-style motion windows. Yet each one of these was considered good in its day and the men who devised them were clever trimmers. There can be no doubt that some of the old-fashioned windows attracted great crowds, but the merchant of to-day appraises the value of a crowd in front of his windows in proportion to the sales that are made.

In the opinion of the writer there is a gradual growing tendency toward the overelaboration of window displays. The decorative features are too involved and too ornate to best serve the purpose for which they are intended. Backgrounds are made with such elaborate details that whatever merchandise may be shown is completely overshadowed. The interest of the beholder is centered upon the window dresser's work rather than upon the goods that are to be sold. There is another criticism that may be made against the elaborate background in a good many cases, and that is, the subject chosen for reproduction are not suitable for the comparatively limited confines of the show window. This applies particularly to some of the architectural schemes of decoration that are now so popular. Columns and figures that might serve admirably as embellishments for the front of some magnificent building do not always lend themselves to the adornment of a show window with equal attractiveness. There need always be a sympathy between the background and the merchandise that is to be shown in front of it.

Another object to the heavy background is that it usually takes up more room than it should. It also costs more than is necessary and requires too much time in the preparation. It is not the intent of the writer to condemn all elaborate window settings. There are some occasions when it is desirable to use the windows as general advertisements of the store rather than to sell goods. In such times the merchandise is but a detail of the general scheme of decoration. These occasions, however, are rare. And another thing that the trimmer in the average store should consider is that settings which might appear appropriate for some of the immense city department stores would appear ridiculous when attempted with cheap materials in a smaller window. Much depends upon the store.

The writers opinion of an ideal window for all every-day occasions is one that has a neat background, neutral in design and color with some slight decorative effects to take away its bareness and give it a little color and life. To this add some dainty and graceful feature in the form of a small stand or table of unusual design, decorated with flowers, plants and ribbons gracefully arranged. Take this sort of a simple setting and add to it ready-to-wear merchandise handled with a careful regard for color and arrangement and the window will sell far more goods than one with a much more elaborate and fussy arrangement.

A window dresser who has some skill with tools can easily design stands that are simple in construction and so graceful in form that they will give artistic character to any window in which they may be used. It is better to adhere to straight lines rather than attempt elaborate curves. For special occasions, when something a little out of the ordinary is wanted, one of these art stands may be used with a light background setting. The letter, however, should invariably be in the same style and character as the stand. For example with Colonial style stands use simple Colonial setting for background. The background must be of light construction and simple and not extend clear across the back. That gives too much symmetry. Let it stand a little farther on one side than the other, with a break in the middle. If columns are used, they may be made in the same manner as the stand. Try to avoid the conventional lattice. It has been used so much that it is becoming somewhat tiresome. Another to avoid is the straight white picket fence. When it was first used, this sort of a fence was quiet a novelty, but it has now been used thousands of times and consequently has lost much of its attractiveness.

If the trimmer will use a little thought and invention in placing the stand, he can work out some unusually attractive settings that will be found particularly effective in displaying ready-to-wear goods, millinery, etc. For summer goods, light and airy garden-like effects that are in keeping with summer wear should be employed. Moss green tulleton hung behind the background setting will give it a better perspective and atmosphere.

The stands should be substantially made, so that they can be used on various occasions, and should be of different styles, covered with white enamel carefully applied. The foliage and flowers can be adapted to the style of goods displayed, the best effects being secured with artificial flowers and leaves, which are now made in such perfection that they rival nature in appearance, and they do not fade or require attention. A ribbon may also be used in good effect in connection with the stand.

Most window decorations are destined to die to much rather than too little, and the tendency of the times is toward simple but striking effects by the use of few articles tastefully displayed. One of the most attractive windows in New York this week contains only two or three light-colored coats against a background of red with a few flowers to heighten the effect. Such simple displays will attract more attention than elaborate attempts at the impossible. The average window is too small for anything but the simplest arrangement of two or three articles.

The point in all window display is to attract attention to the article you wish to sell, and not to make an exhibition of the mechanical skill of the window trimmer.

USES VARNISH FOR PUDDING

"Handy" Man Doubts Front Door With Girou and Wife Putt Glossy Fluid in Pantry.

Mr. Brewster thought his front door needed a coat of varnish so he did it no harm, and resolved to do it himself, to save the expense of a painter.

Finding an old "golden syrup" tin in the yard, he went out of the shop for some time and "whacked" the lid off it in the pantry for the night, and was up early next morning and by half past twelve had got the door finished.

"I don't like it, now it's done," he said to his wife.

"It's not 'golden,' replied she, "He's sold you the wrong sort of stuff."

He thought so, too, and went back to the shop, taking what was left with him.

"This is funny varnish you sold me," said he. "It's dull, sticky stuff."

After examining it, the shopman said: "This is not what I sold you. This is syrup."

It then dawned on him that he had got out of the wrong tin and he went back home to explain to his wife, who at once said: "Good gracious, James! And I've made the pudding with the other stuff!" Then, after a moment's pause, "You'll dine today on mutton and varnish pudding!"

TOO LATE.

Hiram Brown—Well, b'gosh! The buncy fellers in Na York didn't get my money this time.

Squire Haystack—I want to know why.

Hiram Brown—Because the colored porter on the sleeper got ahead of 'em.

To a Certain Sweet Extent.

"Do you wholly trust me, darling?" murmured the young man to the fair creature who was sitting beside him on the front seat of the trolley car.

"I do to a certain extent," she responded after a little hitch of breath.

"What extent?" he asked, anxiously. "Why," she explained, "I would trust you to the extent of not being afraid to do there being any police in the candy you might send me by mail."

Own Up Now.

Eleanor, aged six, had been going to school only a few weeks. She had learned to raise her hand if she wanted anything. One day she put this into effect when she wanted to go to the door to get some eggs.

Just as she reached the chicken door her mother heard her say: "All you chickens that have laid an egg, raise your hands."—The Delineator.

Brute.

With almost girlish pride she displayed the crucifers she had cooked for him with her own little hands.

"How do you like them?" she ventured at tea.

"Well," he chuckled, trying to extract his teeth from one, "It would have been better if you had made them very much larger. Then I could have used them as automobile tires."

A Morning Spat.

She (angrily)—I can stand this no longer; you're utterly unbearable, and I'm going back to mother this very morning.

He (coolly)—Very well, that arrangement will suit me exactly; I'll see you this evening. I met your mother yesterday and she invited me to take supper with her tonight.

As Compared.

"How's that?" queried the information seeker.

The Actress Query.

"Yes," said the poultry fancier, "these chickens are too expensive to eat."

"Indeed!" rejoined the young lady from the city. "Then why are you feeding them?"

In Other Words.

"The situation was funny enough to make a horse laugh," said the Chicago girl.

"Indeed!" exclaimed the Boston maid. "I never witnessed an equine cinnamom."

The horse got its foot fastened and could not move, but the doctor managed to reach the shore, and went for help. Some parties swam out and cut the horse loose from the buggy, and freed its foot, and it swam till it landed on an island, and could not be gotten off till Saturday morning. Wonderful Flight Is Made By Glenn Curtiss.

Glenn H. Curtiss, of Hammondsport, N. Y., established a new record for over-water flights by traveling over Lake Erie from Euclid Beach to Cedar Point, O., approximately sixty miles. His average time was forty-five miles an hour, although a stretch of twenty miles was covered at a rate of a mile a minute.

Things Get Better.

In spite of all the confusions and quarreling, the world seems more like and the counterstroke of fate, it is manifest that, in the long run, human life becomes broader than it was, gentler than it was, finer and deeper. Once the whole—and now days almost steadily—things get better, and it is brought about by good will working through the efforts of men.—H. G. Wells.

Side-Stepping a Sneeze.

Probably everybody has experienced the displeasure, if not actual pain, of missing a sneeze, whether it comes from missing a sneeze, or from having a cold, that one happens to be out of doors at the time and the weather is clear. Just glance at the sun. There is something about the brightness of it that suggests a cure for the cold or whatever it is that is needed, and nine times out of ten if the sneeze has not got too far away it will come back.
